TREE EXPERT CO.

Neighbor, Co-op Member, Asplundh Employee

Properly mixed and applied herbicides are considered a safe, effective and valuable tool in utility vegetation management. But some customers are resistant to the use of herbicides near their homes.

Asplundh General Foreperson Josh Mowell and his family have lived in this part of Tennessee for generations and have always been members of Holston Electric Cooperative. He understands the concerns of his fellow members, so he and his crews take the time to explain – in a polite, straightforward way – how the products are used safely and effectively. The result is happy customers and safe, reliable electricity.
